They won't tell you....There is a cure for LYME!

I have been researching an herbal cure for Lyme for a long time. The doxycycline clearly does not work.

I have known quite a few people who have been treated with antibiotics and they still live with debilitating symptoms from the Lyme.

After my daughter got bit by a tick I was looking into starting the Japanese Knotweed tincture that I have. I looked for any evidence that it might actually prevent Lyme from taking hold. For anyone who does not know...Japanese Knotweed is very effective in treating Lyme.

I stumbled upon something called Cryptolepis Sanguinolenta. It is an African root. It turns out...it completely KILLS Lyme in 7 days. I looked further and found that even the NIH website admits this...they also admit Doxy does NOT completely kill Lyme. They also admit that Japanese Knotweed is the second most effective killer of Lyme.

If you know anyone battling Lyme, or if you want to stay away from doctors (as I do), and still be able to treat your family....get some of these tinctures!

Not only does the Cryptolepis Sanguinolenta kill Lyme...it also treats Malaria, TB, Hepatitis and Septicemia.

They are not going to announce this to the world but they quietly publish the studies on these curative herbs on their websites.

See for yourself...be well.

I am pretty sure if it's the whole root in the pills it's comparable. Some pills are just the reservatrol which is a compound IN the knotweed.

The wife had 2 strains of Lyme that was cured by taking daily doses of ivermectin for 2 weeks, seems to work as well for the other diseases you listed. Maybe they are related

I have had a sneaking suspicion that Lyme is NOT a bacteria but a parasite. Why else would anti-parasite meds work to cure it? My mother tried the Ivermectin and it seemed to clear up some of the lingering pain in her joints. Curious right?

Re: They won't tell you....There is a cure for LYME!

Thank you, my sister spent a week in the hospital last month for LYME disease. She didn't realize what it was and was getting deathly ill at home.

As soon as she said she was bitten by a tick I gave her the diagnosis over the phone and they rushed her to the hospital.

But it took her 2 weeks to get to that point where she told me she was in trouble.

Speed of treatment is essential. Dang near killed her.

Her mental function was highly impaired until they had her on the meds for a week. She is still having some issues but much better. She is still in a lot of pain.

The Canadian Government only recently admitted that Lyme disease was a thing.
Up until 5 years ago they would punish doctors for suggesting a patient had lyme disease and absolutely refused to acknowledge it.

Lyme disease is a lab created disease that uses the indestructible ticks as a means of spreading.

These herbal treatments should help her with those lingering issues! I know a family friend that was diagnosed late and during the antibiotic treatment was not feeling a whole lot better. She started the Japanese Knotweed and felt better in TWO days. I call that substantial.

It is pretty much understood that this is how Lyme came about. They try to make it seem like it has been around a long time. Not true.

The research labs on Plum Island and at Fort Detrick were working on using bugs for "Entomological warfare."

Don't you realize that is why it is called LYME....for Lyme , CT where it ended up after being "accidentally" released from Plum Island.

Re: They won't tell you....There is a cure for LYME!

I got Lyme from a tick. It kinda freaked me out that I had a circular rash on my bicep but I thought it was just a weird spider bite reaction. I had no idea that Lyme was a thing so I just ignored it. The rash went away but a few weeks later my arm felt like it was broken. I rarely needed to go to the doctor because I have been an athlete my entire life winning several provincial titles. I ate very healthily, work out, and jogged 5 to 10km a day.

I was in tip-top shape but I decided to go see the doctor because the pain was much worse than a normal muscle strain from overdoing my weight training. The doctor checked me out, said I was all good, and offered me some pain relief pills which I said no thanks. As I put my shirt on he asked me if anything out of the ordinary has happened to me. I mentioned the circular spider bite and he turned and looked at me and said it wasn't a spider and it can be quite serious. I said from an insect bite????? I thought and said Im sorry but a bug bite isn't going to affect me much. He said he could set up a test but he said that test isn't going to properly detect anything. He said he could request another test but it was very expensive anyway. He had a dinner date that he was late for so he said it would probably not be approved and if anything happens I'll just come back in. I said don't worry about it, go to your dinner, and if anything happens I'll just come back in.

It wasn't long before Lyme kicked the shit out of my mind, body, and soul. I couldn't remember anything, I didn't even remember going to the doctor. I had brain fog like you wouldn't believe and no energy to do anything and muscle pain all the time along with level 9 tinnitus all the time and many other issues. I barely survived for years and when I finally went back to the hospital they said my Medicare card had expired and because I had not been to the hospital for so long that I would have to prove that I was a Canadian citizen that has been living in Canada. So I filled out all their forms and sent them in because it was all done by regular mail for some reason and then they sent me more forms and then again. Months later they tell me they can't confirm that I was a Canadian citizen. I said I have filed my taxes for the last 20 years cant you check that and she said no. I said what did I do then and she said she didn't know. I told her I'm feeling pretty sick and can I come in and get checked out while this is straightened out and she said not until it gets resolved.

I managed to survive by eating healthy, fasting, and taking a number of supplements to barely carry me through the day. If I wasn't so healthy to begin with it might have killed me.

Anyway, What really helped me was taking ivermectin to prevent getting covid. The day after my first dose I felt better than I had in so many years, gaining back at least 50% of my energy levels before I got bit. It also helped clear my mind of brain fog and horrible memory recall. Lyme is not a joke and the population should be made more aware of its devastating effects. Why are the Medical institutions so concerned with my dog getting Lyme disease that he has to get a Vaccine yet barley a peep about humans getting it? Not that I would get a Lyme vaccine at this point in the game.

What a story! I am so sorry you went through all of that. You are correct...Lyme is NO joke. It is far scarier than Covid and has some serious long term effects. I really hope you continue to improve and perhaps trying some of the herbal remedies would bring you back to 100%.

Well, sometime Lyme can be a joke.

Drunk says to the bartender, "Does limes have legs?"

Bartender says, "of course not ya limey lush"

The drunk replies, " Well, burp, I just squeezed your parakeet into my drink then".
